What's New In Statuzer?

Statuzer is the AIR application that makes Twitter the most fun there is on the web today! With Statuzer you can easily read and reply to status updates from people you are following, view tweet information, like, follow, and list people you follow, and share multimedia files and links to your friends. Requires: AIR 2.0 or higher. Statuzer does not run on the Simulator. Notes: Statuzer can be set to run in either "Full Screen" or "System Tray" mode. In Full Screen mode it will look like any other application with a picture. In System Tray mode, it will look like a small pop up window with information about the status updates.  If you enjoyed this update, or any of the updates that came before it, please rate it and leave a comment, even if it's just to say that you enjoyed it. I hope you continue to enjoy Statuzer. If you want to learn more about updating the Statuzer App go to the Statuzer Wiki. Yours, Jason  Latest Updated v1.5 Since v1.4, Statuzer has added support for sending and receiving multi-columns updates. This allows you to type a tweet from the bottom portion of the screen. This helps make your tweet longer, and also makes it easier to read, as the length of the updates will never be longer than the size of your monitor. In addition, I have included a new option in the "Account Settings" section of Statuzer that allows you to choose between Twitter's "card" display, or the more classic "list" display. New: Multicol In order to make multi-column tweets easier to read, Statuzer now supports multi-column tweets. Statuzer can receive multi-column updates from Twitter, and can send multi-column updates to Twitter. If you set Statuzer to receive multi-column updates, and you have set Statuzer to "Full Screen" in your Twitter settings, when you receive a multi-column update, Statuzer will automatically "wrap" your tweet, and the update will display on your desktop in a multi-column format. If you don't want to get multi-column updates, simply select "Single Column" when you receive them. New: Account Settings In Statuzer, you can now choose from the list of accounts you want to follow, and then which columns you want to
