Your Free Desktop – Apple Edition Was watching an old episode of the View where the guy's PC crashed. The interview was with the dude who purchased it from the company who sold it to him, from which I learned the Model Name of his PC and the Graphic Chip it was running. Just looked it up, and turns out that I own two of the same computers. Both I purchased from Apple. I got a Macintosh SE at work where I was responsible for ordering it, since I was in charge of the network. The next computer was also ordered by me, and that was the Macintosh with Wlan booting into MacOS9 - which was used as the primary computer while I was traveling last spring. Once I brought home my current system, I installed DREW and ALL has been good. I was truly disappointed that I lost the ability to print out those pictures that were downloaded from Flickr. No one has bothered to write me yet to ask me if that is a feature I still have. So it is nice to know that I have an option for it. Oh, and while I was looking at the G4s, I noticed that there is a chance that the "Red" iMac might be over due for a refresh. Q: jQuery lightbox - calculate image width? How do you calculate the width of an image before displaying it in a lightbox? I know that the image is typically loaded via the data-original attribute, but is there a way to calculate it without loading the image first via a GET request? A: You're looking for the .data function. $(function() { var imageWidth = $("img").data('originalWidth'); $("lightbox").append(""+imageWidth+""); }); Of course, you could also use the .width function, if you really wanted to. It's not mentioned in the documentation, so it may not have been implemented in all browsers. Q: How to download an entire folder of images from a website I'm making a simple desktop application where I need to download an entire folder of images. All these images are hosted on a certain website. I have no idea on how to go about this, I need some kind of "routines" or a "loop" because I've noticed that the website I have to download the images from doesn't have the same way of displaying images as an image-hosting website does. I've tried HttpWebRequest but I have no idea of what to do afterwards. Thanks in advance! A: I don't know your requirements. Nevertheless I hope this kind of solution could help. The requirements are: 1- Coding to download folder of images by loop. 2- Coding to save these image in a folder on your PC. 3- Coding to delete temporary files in folder I've set all the requirements in following link: I did a simple coding for your requirements. Here is sample one. using System; using System.Collections.Generic; using System.ComponentModel; using System.Data; using System.Drawing; using System.Linq; using System.Text; using System.Windows.Forms; namespace DownloadImg { public partial class Form1 : Form { string httpFilePath = ""; string saveFilePath = "D://"; string saveFilePath1 = saveFilePath + "Image01.png"; string saveFilePath2 = saveFilePath + "Image02.png"; string saveFilePath3 = saveFilePath + "Image03.png"; private string _dirPath = @"C:\Users\ImageDownload"; public Form1() {
